PART A

In this Reverse Caption Photo Scavenger Hunt, the team was provided with a list of creative captions, and we had to take a photo of something that we thought best fits the captions.

One constraint was that in each picture, there must be all but one team member. For each caption, we took several pictures, and you will discover the selection process for the final pictures in Part B.

CAPTION 1: Everyone agreed that one look at THIS and you just knew all the beauty in the world was a gift from God.

When we read the caption, our first thought was nature. Maybe there are more people who thought like us and went to the sea, or maybe to the woods. Or maybe they got a picture of a sunset. To us, Bassin Canard was the best option. Not only because it was close but also because it holds a special place in the hearts of UOM students. That place is pretty much a picnic destination among friends. Maybe even a cute date spot! The water sparkles like diamonds under the sun. And the greenery surrounding it only adds to its beauty

CAPTION 2: Maybe we could use THIS for our group mascot

For our first activity which was a presentation, we decided to go for a rather unconventional theme-A guide on how to befriend aliens. Hence, what better mascot to go for than that one alien, arguably known and loved by most-Jaadu from “Koi Mil Gaya”. Since we had some pretty good ideas for the pictures, we decided to adopt that same mascot for the Scavenger Hunt. We wanted to make as if we had found him, befriended him and helped him get on his way. Needless to say, the looks on onlookers’ faces were priceless. They must have thought we were just a bunch of crazy young adults!

CAPTION 3: Amazing! THIS is the true meaning of happiness.

Being able to clutch a maths test is truly an achievement considering all the late nights of practice questions, formulae to remember and scribbles of rough work. Hence, our true meaning of happiness is when the effort truly pays off. It reflects focus, discipline and the joy of understanding each concept and problems.

CAPTION 4: The synonym to being successful in life is THIS.

Dream Car? Porsche in the back. Loaded? Cash in hand. Some may call it flexing, but we call it proof of hard work. Because hey, if you worked for it, why not show it off? Let the picture do the talking, because it shows that the hustle pays off, and don't forget to work hard and enjoy the wins, whether they are big or small.

CAPTION 5: THIS is what the innocence of a child represents

When it comes to ice cream, it is safe to say that everybody loves it. Whether you are enjoying it at home or at the seaside, it always soothes your inner child, which is why we chose ice cream to show what the innocence of a child represents. Hence, when discussing on this picture, the vote was unanimous.

CAPTION 6: It was pretty obvious to the onlookers how THIS was going to end.

One shaky rock, one wrong step and the river was ready to claim its newest fish. Everyone froze for a second. Some watched with shock while others scrambled to help, but seconds later, everyone was doubling over with laughter. This was the kind of moment that tells you that some things are meant to be experienced and not explained. On a side note, while Teesha's fall was planned, Dookhy's commitment to the picture almost landed him in the water.

CAPTION 7: THIS is what our team dreams of.

Our team dreams of the pure relief of knowing there's no lecture being held and the thoughts of tomorrow not bringing any further stress or pressure. Dookhy dreams about taking the day off and spending it in nature. Khushi dreams of food - stress eating, or so she says. Teesha, on the other hand, dreams of sleeping in a comfortable bed. After all, she must make up for all those sleepless nights spent on assignments and revision. With these diverse wishes, we decided to literally picture these as dreams each team member has.

PART B

In the Team Reflection, we needed to have a group discussion addressing the following points. We have decided to base ourselves on 2 activities that we did, namely the Oral Presentation (Presented online) and the Reverse Caption Photo Scavenger Hunt.

Note: Where applicable, the team has decided to include both the Point of View of each team member and the Team Views.

- How our team was formed, how roles were defined, and how decisions were taken.

~How the team came to be:

Initially, the team comprised of 3 members, namely Teesha, Khushi and Ghavish. We all knew each other quite well as we had just taken part in a competition. However, we were then informed that there should be 4 team members, and this is when Khushi suggested that we ask one of her friends, Doorandharsingh, who was also conveniently looking for a team. Soon enough, the team was finalised, and we created a group chat for further discussions. This was how Jaadu came to be! As the online presentation went relatively well, we then decided to keep the same team for the Reverse Caption Photo Scavenger Hunt.

~How the roles were defined:

Ghavish was designated Team Leader as he already had some experience from being the Team Leader in the last competition and from his time as Headboy. Furthermore, Teesha was put in charge of doing the PowerPoint presentation as she had also gained experience during the competition. The research work was then equally divided among Khushi, Doorandharsingh and Ghavish. As from the proofreading, compilation of all our research works and the rehearsal, we made it a must to meet online to ensure that we were all on the same page for each step and, using the STAR model which focuses on aligning individual strengths with specific roles, we ensured that everyone's skills were being used to the maximum and promoted synergy. Ghavish also emphasized on the importance of constructive criticism.

~How decisions were made:

For the decision-making process, we allowed everyone to put their ideas forward, such as the pictures that would be taken, the places we would take the pic, who would be in which picture, which pictures would be used and who would research on each part. Using the Polls Feature, we then took the options which were most voted for. As for the team's name, as aforementioned, we wanted to present an unconventional and fun topic for the first activity and Jaadu, that one alien from "Koi Mil Gaya" seemed to be the best fit. After some further discussions, we had a simple plan, promptly named the 3P's – Pictures, PowerPoint and Present.

However, like every group work, as you'll later discover, our ideas clashed as we had different visions for certain parts.

- We had to assess our team and our individual performance.

~Ghavish:

Although I was sceptical at first, the team functioned quite well and, as we drove around to find the best spots for the pictures for the Scavenger Hunt, we grew closer. I made myself available to the team for any queries and tried my best to avoid any potential reasons for conflicts from cropping up, as well as trying to divide the work in a fair manner and ensuring that everyone's input was considered.

~Teesha:

At first, the Scavenger Hunt activity seemed a little challenging since we had to take a simple caption and turn it into something fun and entertaining. We had to think a lot to come up with good ideas that would make the project not only fun for us, but for our audience when presenting. Through this activity, I was able to express myself creatively by writing funny and quirky captions. I was open to capturing different types of shots to match the captions which were a lot of fun since some ideas were original yet enjoyable.

~ Doorandharsingh:

For both group projects, the team was able to work effectively and complete them on time. Each of us had their share in each submission, in varying quantities, and we made it work by understanding one another. Although I came in by surprise, I feel like I fit in well. I made sure to stay active and provide help when required. Sure, I was quiet at first, but as we filled out the cards and progressed, I really got into it and did my best to contribute.

~Khushi:

Personally, the Scavenger Hunt allowed me to come out of my comfort zone a bit. I had to forgo my anxiety to be the mascot of the group as most of the pictures were taken in a public setting. Most importantly, I really enjoyed myself with my friends and this activity allowed us to strengthen our bond with each other.

~Team Views:

From a team perspective, each member collaborated effectively for both activities. During our meetings, various ideas were shared, showing the creativity of each member and creating synergy. As we spent more time working together, we quickly grew comfortable with one another, which built trust within the group and made sharing thoughts much easier. The brainstorming sessions highlighted the importance of teamwork to ensure improved communication and mutual respect among teammates, as well as better understanding each other's perspectives.

One thing that we all agreed upon is that our time management needs improvement. We noted collectively that there were some parts where we spent too much time and went out of subject quite a few times with the research work, which only added on to the workload and cost even more time. For example, when describing the photos, our perfectionist side took over and slowed us down as we spent extra time refining each sentence.

- The different conflicts that arose and how they were dealt with.

~The conflicts:

The conflicts we had were mostly to do with the PowerPoint Presentation of the first activity, which was the Online Presentation. The first one was regarding the layout and theme of the presentation. As we all had varying taste and ideas, this led to some tension during our group discussions. The other conflict was to do with the time allocation that we would each get to present our part, sparking further disagreement.

Another brief disagreement we had was regarding the time constraint as we drove around to spots to take the pictures for the Scavenger Hunt. As some of us live far away and had to take the bus home at a given time, they were not inclined to accompany us to some of the planned places.

~How it was resolved:

Hence, like every team would, we understood that our priority was to now select a course of action that would benefit the team. Ghavish then decided that we should gather and write down our thoughts and we met online on Google Meet before advancing with the project. Once again, we made sure that everyone's opinions were considered and their doubts answered. Following a rather lengthy discussion, we then did the best we could to merge all our ideas and ensured that everyone pitched in equally for the actual presentation.

As for the Scavenger Hunt, we gathered again to find a solution. We reorganized who would be in which pictures and, wherever possible, we switched spots so that all team members could come. We also relied on the help of random passers by to take our pictures when one member was not present.

- We were each required to appraise our own reactions to the conflict and our perception of both positive and negative outcomes of the conflict on the team.

~Ghavish:

The conflicts brought down the team morale, as what was supposed to be the last steps before completion for the Online Presentation and the starting steps for the Scavenger Hunt was proving to be a hassle. However, both days, as the team met online on Google Meet, and we planned everything again, ensuring that all team members were heard and respectful towards one another.

~Teesha:

The work had slowed down due to the conflict since the PowerPoint presentation was one of the essential parts of this assignment. It was a little frustrating since we couldn't move further. However, it also made us understand that to resolve such an issue, we had to communicate openly and respectfully to be able to find an approach that would suit everyone.

~Doorandharsingh:

I stayed calm and listened to both sides. I suggested that we could combine our ideas rather than going for only one. This approach reduced the tension between the members as well as helped focus on team work rather than individual preferences.

~Khushi:

To be honest, the conflict caused some frustration as it happened at the worst time. Things were going smoothly, and we were preparing for what was meant to be a final mock presentation. So, we had to once again adapt our scripts to the new layout by writing new ones and relearn our lines.

~Team Views:

Although it was a sticky situation that bothered the whole team, it made us realise we should always predict for such situations while working in teams. It is also important that even during times of frustration, we talk to our peers with respect and think about their feelings and opinions. Despite the conflict having its negatives impact, I believe that overcoming it only helped us improve ourselves by communicating and coming up with creative solutions as a team.

- Lastly, we had to explain our learning outcomes, such as our achievements and what we learnt through these activities.

~Ghavish:

Having initially worked in teams for various projects, it is surprising as to how you still learn new things each time. We have had disagreements, but we learnt that as long as we all respect each other and voice out our opinions, as well as listen to others, team projects should not be hard or exhausting. These activities certainly allowed the team to bond and understand each other better and most importantly, albeit the conflicts, we laughed quite a lot.

~Teesha:

Working as part of a team taught me how to effectively communicate with people, which is something I sometimes struggle with, especially when talking to strangers, and share and accept other people's ideas and opinions. This activity helped me understand the value of teamwork, good planning, and also taught me that happiness can be found in everything that we do, as long as we put our heart into it and enjoy even the smallest moments.

~Doorandharsingh:

From both activities, I learnt that teamwork requires patience communication and flexibility, as well as the importance of adapting quickly when in a new group. Moreover, I learnt how to deal with different type of personalities as well as how to handle disagreements within the group. These activities also allowed to see through the perspective of my fellow members rather than acting selfishly and adopting a "one-man army" mentality. Having respect, clear coordination among members and being able to compromise makes a good team.

~Khushi:

Working with the team helped me develop my communication skills as it is the main key to make things work out. I was able to voice out my questions and listened to others and provide my opinions. I also learnt the importance of good planning so that we could manage to do all within the time limit that we had.

~Team Views:

At first, we were unsure of where to even start, but after some discussions, ideas started flowing in. We first headed to Bassin Canard, where we were able to take a moment to appreciate the beautiful scenery and truly bond as we seized the opportunity to talk and get to know each other. For our mascot, it was both embarrassing yet hilarious, and a bonding moment as we had a blast, to have our teammate dress up in a yellow hoodie and walk around in public. We really thought we'd end up on social media that day! In the end, the activity was full of laughter and memories we will always cherish. Furthermore, it allowed the whole team to understand the importance of effective communication and helped some of us overcome our fear of public speaking.

It is safe to say that, after having worked in a team, we have all fostered a new viewpoint on teamwork and collaboration. Overall, it was a successful activity which emphasized on good teamwork, interpersonal and communication skills.
